

WILSON SOUZA

Artist Statement

I am Wilson Souza, a painting artist. My paintings are visual representations of emotion, memory, and cultural narratives. Each painting I create carries a story that embraces the ordinary subjects of the world around us, holding reflections of social thought—sometimes gentle, sometimes intense—but always as a mirror of everyday life and human experience.

Women play a central role in my paintings. The beauty of women, their emotions, desires, the oppression they face, and their daily lives are the main inspirations behind my work. My paintings attempt to capture both the inner and outer worlds of women—not just their physical form, but also how they represent resilience, intelligence, and freedom.

The style I use is semi-abstract, carrying clarity along with elements of strangeness. With a powerful blend of secondary and primary colors, I paint with vigorous brushstrokes—each stroke becoming an expression in itself. I strive to shape these strokes into visual emotion. I believe this style moves beyond defined outlines, giving depth to feelings and space to doubts.

To me, every painting is a unique journey that gives me a new experience. My descriptions aim to share the internal story behind the artwork—with inspiration, struggle, emotion, and message expressed through it. Through art, I try to make the invisible visible and transform ordinary life into something divine.
